

MEANINGFUL ONLINE CONSENT: SHARING ONLINE CONTENT AND INFORMATION

Meaningful consent

Is agreement of the able people to participate in an action after becoming fully aware of its aim, scope and consequences and without coercion, obligation or power imbalance between the participating parties.

When does consent become necessary?

When someone asks your consent

You should give your consent to participate in an action

With awareness of the aim, full scope and consequences

With guidance and permission of your parents

Without obligation or duress

By prioritizing your own need for privacy and security

Freely, without pressure from anyone including your friends

Specifically, for that action and for that instance only

While asking the consent of others

If someone shares you publicly without your meaningful consent

- ✓ Don't hesitate to make your objection known even if you become aware after they have already shared
- ✓ Tell a trusted person what happened and be open to their support
- ✓ Report the content that includes you to be taken down by the platform administration
- ✓ Block the person that has done this inconsiderate act
- ✓ Apply to authorities if it turns into repeated harassment

Don't forget that any content put online can become forever accessible by anyone, including the people you will meet in the future and your future self!
